AMMAN, June 3 (JNA). — His Majesty King Hussein presided at a meeting of the administrative governors at the Ministry of Interior this morning, attended by Premier Mudar

Badran, Chief of the Royal Court Sharif Abdul Hamid Sharaf and Minister of Interior

Suleiman Arar, during which the delivery of public services in the governorates and districts was reviewed, together with progress on development schemes.

His Majesty said the carrying out by every citizen of his and her responsibilities towards their society indicates a commitment to the country's interest. Fulfilling one's duty in the best manner leads to raising the society's standard to the highest level that can be attained in every field, so that "we provide our countrymen with the necessary guidance and support, with sound planning, continuous follow-up and fruitful effort."

A review was also made of progress of public services in each governorate, as the King listened to reports from the administrative governors. At the end of the meeting the King called on the governors to deal with issues in their districts "in a spirit of belief in the human being and in the citizen, and with lova and confidence". His Majesty also called for involving

The King wanted a study to emphasise decentralisation principles in local government and enable the administrative governors to exercise greater power consonant with the duties of productive work and speedy achievement.

Will Mr. Begin now Jerusalem? invade

It is noteworthy - - and rather a dilemma for the Israeli leadership under Premier Menachem Begin -that the bomb explosion in a bus in occupied Jerusalem this week comes just when the Israelis are to pull out the last of their 25,000 invasion force in south Lebanon. Noteworthy, we suggest, because the Israeli invasion had the stated aim of stopping Palestinian resistance activity from Lebanese territory, on the pathetic Israeli assumption that the Palestinians. would disappear if only south Lebanon were pacified, and that assumption has been rather emphatically blown to shreds. Mr. Begin has the choice now of sending his 25,000 invasion-hardened soldiers to occupy Jerusalem, or as is very likely, to intensify the already harsh occupation and Israeli military presence in the West Bank and Gaza. But Mr. Begin should wander back into history, into his violent years between 1930 and 1948, and he should remember that the more occupying forces that are stationed in Arab territory, the more available targets one then has to carry out a violent resistance

The Israeli leadership is caught in the explosions of its own contradictions, and no matter how many times a Western leader condemns the killing of "innocent" civilians, the overwhelming lessons of the past five thousand years of history teach us that occupation begets resistance, and longer occupation begets more violent resistance. It happened in the-United States itself, with the rather less bloody Boston Tea Party, for example, as it happened in Europe under the Nazi occupation, as it is happening today over and over throughout occupied Palestine. The way to end the violence is to end the occupation; there are no other choices available to rational men and women. There simply are no other choices at all.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'I Saturday referred to Israeli press reports, quoting officials in Washington, that the United States is oow carrying ornicials in Washington, that the United States is dow carrying out a study for setting up a military alliance with Israel through which the latter would join the NATO membership.

The newspaper says the NATO summit in Washington last weekend ended in "dissipating Israel's fears" by not issuing a NATO-American statement of intentions on the Arab-Israeli dispute. The participants confined themselves to a formula of generalitles conforming with previous pledges by the U.S. administration to Israel. The newspaper goes up to say that the appoundement tion to Israel. The newspaper goes nn to say that the announcement of a Washingtoo-Tel Aviv alliance at this stage, after an alliance had in fact been in existence since the days of former American President Harry Truman, does not change in any way the reality of the Middle East crisis. Israel has always been given as much importance by the U.S. as all the NATO countries put

But, A! Ra'i adds, the question that now arises is: "What will be the future of the Arab states if the American-Israeli military the reality of the Middle East crisis. Israel has always been given newspaper asks, forbids setting up an alliance that comprises 22 Arab countries stretching from (the Atlantic) Ocean to (the Arabian) Gulf? "How numerous are the questions but how few are the answers in this divided Arab world which bas been put between the Israeli hammer and anvil for the past 30 years!", the newspaper concludes.

On the other hand AL DUSTOUR says the explosion in west-ern Jerusalem Friday represents an escalatinn of Arab resistance operations inside the occupied territory. It says the incident refutes Israeli allegations denying the "existence of resistance from inside", and claiming that o erations that necur come from outside.

The newspaper puts th. blame for such incidents and the loss of innocent lives squarely on Israeli Prime Minister Meoachem Begin and his government. By their stubornness and refusal the make peace the Israeli leaders have put the Palestiniao people in a desperate position having no other alternative but to resort to arms after they have been denied their rights to existence and self-determination, Al Dustour adds.

"Suppression leads only to violence, this is the general rule,"

A number of Israeli factions including the Democratic Movement for Change had already warned of the consequences of Mr. Begio's continued intransigence. The Jerusalem locident proves how truly right they were, the newspaper says.3

Pakistani "qawwals" regale Jordanian audience

AMMAN, June 3 - Haji Ghulam Farid Sabri and Troupe, currently visiting Jordan, are the most famous and renowned of Pakistan.

The songs the troupe performs, or "gawwalis," need no introduction to Arabs because this form of religious and devotional singing has its roots in Arabia. In the early days of the great Muslim conquests, the qawwals were wandering minstrels who travelled across the region where Islam had been accepted. Throughout the Muslim world -- from Morocco to Indonesia - - some form of qawwali has existed down the centuriea.

Each region has adapted the basic rhythmic, repetitive form of singing to its own musical tradition. This form of singing is as well known in the Middle East as in the Maghreb. (Northwest Africa). In Turkey the famous whirling dervish dances of Konya have evol-ved from the same base and Iran has deeply influenced this form of music through its great tradition of Sufi and mystical poetry. The repertoire of qawwall has grown from the purely re-lious "na'at" and "kalam" (words in praise of God and Prophet) to cover devotional poems and sonnets in praise of outstanding Muslim figures. A contribution to qawwali by Amir Khusro (a celebrated devout Muslim) was the rendering of qawwalis in the regional language of the Punjab, thus giving it a folk heritage that brought qawwali down from the Moguis to the common

Over the years the basic pa-ttern of qawwali has remained the same as conceived by Amir Khusro, but it has continued to adapt to modern tas-tes and refinements have been introduced, notably in the adoption of 'ghazliat' (songs of praise). Thus a typical qawwali performance today would begin with na'ats followed by poems in qawwali style describing, for example, the epic of Karbala, some Sufi poems (rendered in Persian), and ends in a lighter vein with ghazals from the great Urdu poets like Ghalib. The qawwali players are st-ory tellers of folk and classical music. There are cross rhythms from the "tabla" or drum (which is tuned with a golden hammer), and raucus chanting reodered with marvellous timing and imperious theatrical gesture.

Ghulam Farid's gawwals have also adapted some Arabic and Turqish songs in qawwali Chiefs of the family troupe are Hajl Ghulam Farid and his brother Maqbool Ahmad Sabri -- artists who are looked on with great devotion. The Sabri troupe includes two br-others singing and playing a form of harmonium, two ancillary singers and five instrumentalists -- percussion and a tamboura. The music also relies heavily on clapping and the whole troupe pitches in on the choruses.

While performing, the group dresses up in their national dress which is loose white pants with a knee-length black tunic which is called "sher-wani," The performers feel at ease when they spread them-selves out and sit on the floor cross-legged.

The singers chant the verses, improvising freely in response to the audience's mood by bringing in other poems or translating non-Urdu poems into Urdu or lapsing into woridless ecstasy.

In the choruses, the whole troupe erupts in a flurry of percussion beats and singing in earthy mison which invariably drives members of the audience to run up to the stage and huri paper money at the performers It is also a sign of encouragement for the sin-

They also took India by storm where vest au-diences flocked around them to witness the qawwalis which they had only heared on Radio Pakistan until then. In Jordan too, many are already enchanted by their magic which comes through the qawwalis. On Friday there was a cial performance at Pakistani Ambassador Mr. Shaharyar Khan's residence where His Highness Prince Hassan and Her Highness Princess Sanv-

Two experts speak out on women's positions in U.S., rural Third World areas

By Ian Kellas Special to the Jordan Times

Women in the U.S. worse off now than the last generation?

AMMAN, June 2 - Women in the United States are now actually worse off relative to men than they were 30 years ago. And yet this does not stop men from feeling that they are now being discriminated against This is one rather startling fact about the women's movement in the U.S. which Ms. Judith Stiehm, a political scientist from the University of Southern California, chose to focus on during a talk which she gave to some of the delegates of the current Regional Conference for Arah Wo-

According to Ms. Stiehm, women in the U.S. now earn on average 58 per cent of what men earn. She compares this figure with that of another 'lunder windlessell' ther "under-privillaged" group: the blacks. Black men in the U.S. earn on average 75 per cent of what white men earn.

Ms. Stiehm believes that the reason women as a group are more discriminated against than black men -- despite bellef to the contrary -- is at least in part because women are not a minority.

More than half the American women who could work. now do work, she said. More than half the women, even, those who have children, work outside the home. It is possible, Ms. Stiehm suggested, to give full equality to a racial minority composing ten per cent of the population without attacking your own interests too fundamentally. But when it comes to doing the same for group that forms half the population, it is different ma-

Men have begun to feel discriminated against, Ms. Stiehm believes, not because they really are often enough, but because they suffer "relative deprivation" compared to their fathers or brothers. They have lost some of the male's ain that put on the leaders of traditional superiority over women The implication perhaps is that women have not paid sufficient attention to the potential male hacklash against their movement.

Ms. Stiehm also draws attention to the contradiction that can often exists between the private and the public roles of the "successful woman." For a start, a survey of successful American women has apparently shown that most of them claim their male partners to he more successful than they are -- which perhaps suggests that in their private lives, even successful women seek out males whom they can look up to. Related to this is the strthe women's movement. They are given special status as "successful women" while their actual power and influence remains very slight. Often enough this leads to what Ms. Stiehm terms "burn out" among leading women. She also suggests that women campaigners have not heen sufficiently sympathetic to the man's actual role. She claims, for instance, that the female in fact often has a greater choice of roles than the man -- even if those roles may not be the socially preferred ones. There are enormous social pressures, for instance against a man opting to he just a house husband. she said

Women often forget that the man is not only "liberat-ed", out also hurdened with responsibilities for a family. His job may be desirable but it is also prohably more arduous than most women give him credit for.

giving both partners the chance to do jobs. Rural men, not women, to blame for population explosion in Third World?

While Ms. Stiehm has been concerned with successful women in a so-called developed country, Ms. Perdita Huston, a journalist and writer who is also attending the conference has been concentrating on the other end of the scale. She has written two books based on conversations with rural women -- most of them illiterate and poor -- from the third World.

She told the Jordan Times that planners have been making a big mistake by, assuming somehow that women are to blame for the population

Ms. Huston has found that rural women tend to be aware of the fact that they need fewer children nowadays, because fewer die. They often emphasised to her that they wa-nied "quality" rather than "quantity" in their families.

The main reason that women gave Ms. Huston for having large families was that their husbands insisted on it. The reason behind this appeared to be the man's desire to demonstrate his virility.

The conclusion which Ms. Huston draws is that to be effective, family planning campaigns must be aimed at the couple, rather than just the woman, If anything, it is perhaps more important to change the attitudes of the male since he is the one who wields the power.

Ms. Huston went on to point out that it is short sighted to give most training opportu-nites to men rather than women. After all, she says, it is the women who to 80 per cent of the world's agricultural work. Why are they so rarely taught how to drive a tractor? Women's education is crucial, Ms. Huston believes, because it is the women who teach the next generation.

At the same time, the normal priorities for education are perhaps wrong. Ms Huston asked her rural ladles what they would like to learn if they had the chance. "Very seldom did a real women say:
I want to read". The things they stressed, Ms. Huston said, were the "survival skills", like nutrition, agriculture or child care. Ms. Huston's findings might adjust the romantic pic-ture of the traditional rural of life. It was true, she said, that most of the women felt that their lives were more difficult than their mothers' had been And this was mainly because of the problems of dealing with cash At the same time, when poor and illiterate women were asked whether they would have prefered to be born men. Ms. Huston said that nearly all declared without hesitation :

Yes". This was not, however, the case with those who had had a bit of training and educati-on. Ms. Huston found that those people were glad to be

Last October, Ibrahim traveled to Egypt to research materials for his doctoral dissertation, entitled "Muawiya Ibn Ahl Sufyan -- A Study in Arab History.

"I arrived in Cairo at a very historical period," he commen-ted, "I witnessed President Sadat's trip to Jerusalem and the reciprocal trip back by the

"A few weeks later, I travelled to Tunis and unexpectedly became an eyewitness to the general strike that evolved into a hloody uprising."

Poor mail service forced Mr. Ibrahim to make an impromptu return to the States in late March. Once his missing mail was taken care of, he agreed to speak about his experiences in Cairo and Tunis to a Palestinian-Arab fund-raising dinner in Los Angeles.

"It was at that meeting that I learnt Arab-Americans planned to march at the Academy Awards in behalf of Vanessa, he said

"A campaign had been going on for weeks by the Jewish Defence League (JDL) and American Zionist groups to pressure the Academy Awards nominating committee to with-draw Ms. Redgrave's name be-cause she had narrated the documentary film The Palestinians,"

The night before the Academy Awards, there was a private screening of The Palestinians for the Arab-American Fund -- it raised: $12,000.

Vanessa attended. Try to imagine the next night -- the Academy Awards - at the Los Angeles Music Centre, Kleig lights, limousin-es, the top film stars arriving dressed to the teeth for the festivities. We Arabs -- about 250 of us -- wore kafiehs and carried posters. The stars stepped out of their limousines to be interviewed by the press and in the background there were 250 of us kafieh-wearing marchers chanting Free, Free Palestiwaving signs that ne, and

"We Love Vanessa "We support the PLO," "Zionism Is Racism."

"What the police hadn't expected was about 15 members of the American Nazi Party in addition to more than 50 members of the JDL.

"The Los Angeles press om-itted this very important fact-the JDL and the American Nazi Party were pitted toge-ther to protest Vanessa Redgrave. Granted, the Nazis were protesting her anti-Nazl role in the movie Julia, the JDL was protesting her narration of the documentary The Palestinians, nevertheless, they shared a common objective.

"The Los Angeles police patiently tried to abort any confrontations by separating the Arabs, the JDL and the Nazis into three groups. Suddenly, the JDL and the Nazis hroke through their protective circles of prices." circles of police.

"We Arahs simply sat hack and watched the JDL and the Nazis go at it.

Several people were arrested, many more -- including a policeman -- were injured, hut regardless of press reports, the only people involved in the hrouhaha were the JDL and the American Nazis.

"In the meantime, the loudspeaker announced what was going on inside the Music Centre, When we heard Vanessa had received the award for best supporting actress, we st-arted dancing the debke and singing Balady."

A small, attractive woman beside Ibrahim at the pro-Vanessa ralley was his fiance, Nancy Halpern, a UCLA co-ed of Jewish parentage. The two have organised a group in So-uthern California under the name of JAAZ, Jews and Arabs Against Zlonism.

So, far, membership of JAAZ is about 15 people in Los Angeles," Ibrahim said. "Our hest known member is the movement singer Ruthle Gortan. We hope to soon have chapters in New York and New Jersey.

No doubt the organising force behind the East Coast chapters will he Ibrahim's mother who founded a Red Crescent Society in the Bronx. She also teaches three classes in Arabic language, history and lite-rature to Palestinian children in New Jersey.

women's meet resumes debate on plan of action

AMMAN, June 3 (JNA). -The Regional Conference for Arab Women today resumed its meeting at the Amman Chamber of Industry huilding. The fifth chapter of the proposed plan for integration of women in the development pertaining to the regional and international cooperation was debated today along with the plan of action of the World Decade for Women which began in 1976 and will continue until 1985. The meeting was attended by His Highness Crown Prince Hassan, the honorary chairman of the confe-rence, Her Highness Prin-cess Sarvath and Her Highness Princess Basma, the honorary President of the Jordanian delegation.

Much of the tension between married partners purportedly began when the man started going outside the home to work. Women often complain that this left them stranded in the house and unfulfilled, hut Ms. Stiehm points out that no research has been done into the effect that this divorce of work from the home had upon the man's feelings as a member of the family. It may be that been deprived in some important way.

While Ms. Stiehm, refuses to be drawn into pinpointing the moral of all this for a country like Jordan, she does hint that the women's movement has a crucial part to piay in development. Drawing on the history of the hlack movement in the U.S., Ms. Stiehm points out that the way out of the poverty trap is not so much by educating the man to a stage where he can earn a middle class salary, as by

Tunisia causes upset MAJOR 3–1 California Angels lose to finals Mexico victory over

ROSARIO, Argentina, June 3 (R). — Tunisia, rated 1,000 to one outsiders, pulled off the first major upset of the 1978 World Soccer Cup finals last night when they beat Mexico 3-1 in their Group Two match here. Mexico handed out flags to win support. Tunisia settled for flowers, played football with a smile and surprised the world by winning

"It's not a war. It's just foothall," said team chief Abdel Majid Chetali after his team of near unknowns eclipsed Mexico to hecome the first African qualifier to win a match in a World Cup final series.

The Mexican players, who tossed somhreros and paper flags to their fans before the match, carried Argentine flags onto the field. Mr. Chetali turned down an offer hy the organisers to do the same and chose instead to send his men on with flowers.

The Tunisian team chief explained his view over a quiet drink in the team's hotel as Argentine fans celebrated their team's victory the same night.

Expected to Win nothing

Mr. Chetali, whn captained Tunisia during the 1960's, takes a relaxed view of the World Cup finals. He had said he expected Tunisia to win nothing, yet with one series of macompleted in Group Twn, his side is ahead of defending champions West Germany in the points table

"If the Germans and Poles let us play like we did against Mexico we'll be in the second round. Tunisa could heat Po-land 1-0, 3-0 or 4-0," Chetall told a press conference with impish hravado after the game. But he knows the odds are stacked overwhelmingly against

He hopes for a draw against the Poles, but wants his team to go on playing the adventurous brand of football which won the admiration and support of the local crowd,

Not that Mr. Chetall believes that the high ideals of pure sportsmanship are always enough. Italy beats France

Italy, swung into retaliation after cooceding a shock first minute goal, stormed back to beat France 2-1 in the opening Group One match of the 1978 World Cup finals in Mar Del Plata yesterday.

With the game barely 30 seconds old, Bernard Lacombe scored to head France into the lead. With talk of dissension in the Italian camp, this immediate reverse could have fed to a collapse of morale.

But Italy shrugged off the concession of the first goal of the tournament and pressed hard hefore equalising in the 29th minute through new young striker Paolo Rossi. The ball hit the French woodwork twice before Rossi put it in the Refreshing attacking football -- in marked contrast to yesterday's opening goalless draw hetween champions West Germany and Poland -- led to near-misses at both ends before substitute Renato Zaccarelli netted the Italian winner in the 54th minute. Italy hardly had time to organise their defence when Didier

Six crossed accurately for La-combe to head past 36-year-old Italian goalkeeper Dino Zoff. The effect of his goal was to force Italy to foresake their usual defensive tactics and move forward in an effort to snatch an equaliser. By the end of the match, France had cause to regret scoring so ear-

A good declarer will guess right more often than not. An expert declarer will do everything he can to avoid facing a guess.

We are not enthralled with the auction. To our mind North has, at hest, a doubtful opening bid. We sympathize with South. He had an awkward response to make, and two no trump was a practical solution to a difficult problem.

West led his fourth-best heart, East won the ace and shifted to a spade. That suggested atrongly that he had no more hearts, for it had to be better to continue partner'a suit than ahift to a suit in which dummy held two honors.

Declarer took the spade finesse and, when it held, he appeared to have nine tricks-six diamonds, two spades and a heart. However when he led a diamond to dummy and East discarded a heart, declarer was back to eight tricks. It seemed that he would have to guess the cluh situation to make his contract, hut he found a pretty good way out of that dilemma.

Declarer won the queen and ace of diamonds, crossed to the ace of spades and then continued with king of diamonds and another, discarding a heart from dummy and conceding a trick to East. Down to nothing hut hlack cards, East had to present a trick to dummy in whichever black auit he returned. That would be declarer's ninth trick, since the king of hearts would furnish an entry to the long diamonds.

Note that it was essential for declarer to get the ace of spades out of the way. Otherwise East could simply have exited with a spade and left declarer with a club guess. Also, observe that East could have defeated the contract.

There was little future in the spade suit. Even if West held the ace, declarer had two stoppers in the suit. It would have been more profitable for East to shift to clubs at trick two. That way the dafenders would have been assured of three club tricks, a heart and a diamond. East needed only to find his partoer with an appropriate club holding, either Q-10-x, Q-x-x-x, or five low clubs, for that defense to succeed.

Gen. Zia is tipped to win clear majority in Abu Dhabi leaves all Bangladesh elections

DACCA, June 3 (R). — The people of Bangladesh voted today in a presidential election amid signs that they would return Major-General Ziaur Rahman as head of state with a clear majority. Many said they were voting for Gen. Zia, 43, because law and order had been maintained in the country and they feared new bloodshed if the opposition came to power.

But even if the general los- retired Gen. Ataul Ghani Osses, he would still hold the mani. real power in his present capacity as martial law administrator and army chief-of-staff.

The election, the first since Gen. Zia came to power in 1975, has narrowed down to a straight fight between him and his former military bose, Gen. Zia wants endorsement for a presidential style of government. Gen. Osmani seeks an immediate return to a full parliamentary system, which the president seys Bangladesh cannot afford after the upheavais of recent years.
